Indeed, in a first course in the mathematics of finance the development of the most important formulas usually involves no greater difficulties than those encountered in the study of geometric progressions. Whether it is because of this seeming simplicity or because of a tendency to limit the problems to the very simplest kinds, the usual presentation has shown a decided lack of generality and flexibility in many of the formulas and their applications. Since no new mathematical principles are involved, a student who can develop and understand the simpler appearing formulas should be able to develop easily the more general formulas, which are much more useful. And no student should use important formulas whose derivation and meaning, and hence possibilities and limitations, he does not understand. There is a marked preference in many...
