The large green leaves of the cowslip bright, And the leaves of the primrose pale, That had faded and droop d in the heat and light, Now rose refresh d in the shadows of night, And rejoiced in the cool sweet air. And many a lesson I learnt at the sight Of the beauty and trusting love Of those leaves that smiled through the shadowy night, And those flowers that bloom d in the broad daylight, And the sun and moon above. TO A RIVER. iLO W on, mysterious symbol of the heart, In changeful wayward loveliness, flow on, And while luxuriant meadows thou dost part, Wooing the modest flowers thy banks upon, --To thee as to a monitor we ll turn, And gather wisdom from fair Nature s page, And gratefully a lesson we will learn, The while we trace thy pleasant pilgrimage. Thy pilgrimage from yonder mountain spring, To the far ocean or the distant sea, Was a most bold and dangerous wandering For thee, a streamlet, in thine infancy; But courage and a beautiful devotion Leads thee in glorious triumph to the rolling ocean. Leads thee through gloomy forests wild and rude, Where thy sweet waters murmur to destroy The deathlike silence and dim solitude, And they seem fill d with happiness and joy When they behold again the light of day, And peacefully through pleasant pastures flow, Thy wavelets sparkling in the sun...
